Why The Lamination Station is the UK’s Go-To for Laminating Films and Print Finishing Solutions

The Lamination Station distinguishes itself from other print finishing services because it places extreme emphasis on both quality and precision in each operation.

The Lamination Station functions as the UK's primary supplier of top-quality laminating films which draws broad appeal from printers and packaging professionals and creative studios who want both reliability and variety plus expedited delivery.

An extensive range of clients throughout UK businesses rely on The Lamination Station because the company fully grasps the scope of lamination.

A Legacy Built on Quality and Innovation

The Lamination Station started its business operations in 1990 and has dedicated thirty years to refine lamination techniques. The company established its foundation with a single aim of providing excellent lamination films but has expanded into becoming a leading print finishing innovation company.

The Lamination Station maintains a dual advantage of deep industry knowledge and advanced materials expertise that has enabled the company to adapt and tackle a rising customer demand between print and package and design and marketing industries.

An Extensive Range of Laminating Films

The Lamination Station achieves excellence through its exclusive range of products. The Lamination Station's catalogue contains the latest technical finishes from thermal and wet films to digital and holographic and BOPP available options today.

Customers seeking luxury packaging benefits from soft-touch lamination whereas hygiene applications need antimicrobial films and businesses require attention-grabbing holographic finishes which The Lamination Station delivers perfectly.

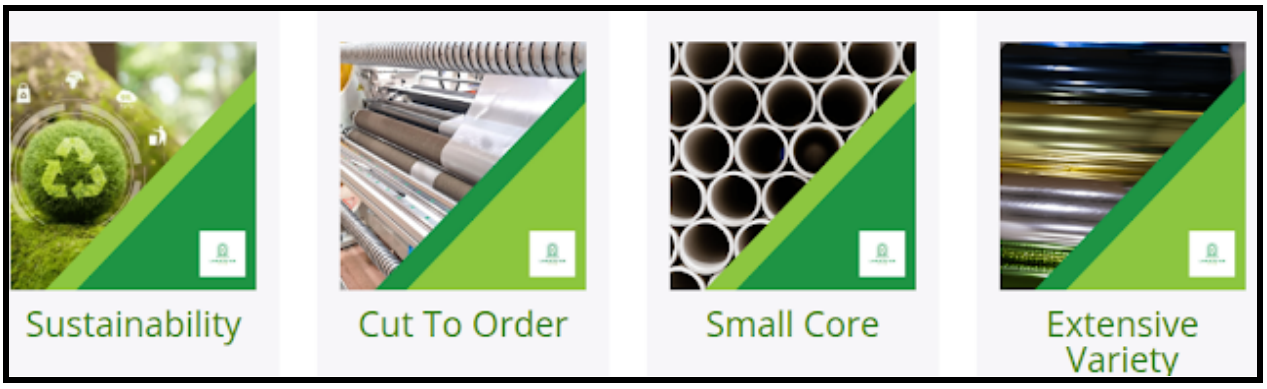
This supplier enables 1", 2" and 3" core usage and supports applications through digital and lithographic printing methods to maintain printing flexibility.

Custom-Cut, Delivered Fast

Print production speed remains important to The Lamination Station and they appreciate this principle above all else. In-house slitting and cutting services allow The Lamination Station to custom-cut and dispatch orders right after 3 p.m.

Such a combination of enhanced speed and adjustability within production processes transforms business operations for customers requiring rapid delivery of customized work.

Sustainability at the Core



Sustainability has become a necessity for modern times. Through its environmentally friendly lamination solutions The Lamination Station provides a wide array of recyclable and biodegradable and post-consumer recycled films.

The BioPP (biodegradable polypropylene), acetate and PIR/PCR materials provide clients with opportunities to maintain environmental integrity while preserving premium output quality.

Full Traceability and Quality Assurance

The Lamination Station extends warranty support together with traceability documentation for all its supplied films. The commitment to quality control at The Lamination Station provides customers with assurance about using materials that exceed industry standards for performance consistency.

Their film products help customers achieve better durability and enhanced look and touch qualities while meeting the needs for high-end brochures and retail displays and protective packaging.

A Partner in Print Finishing

The Lamination Station functions as both supplier and industry partner to the print industry. The team provides quick product advice combined with fast service and exhaustive product comprehension to help clients select appropriate solutions for all their applications.

Customers benefit from the facility in Long Crendon Buckinghamshire warehouse because it contains a huge collection of ready-for-shipment products. This combination makes them ideal both for immediate projects and sustaining long-term product requirements.

Discover The Lamination Station Today

Objectives from industry segments including print, design and packaging now need to learn about the transformative effects of The Lamination Station. The company is refashioning modern-day print finishing by providing wide product variety alongside dependable service alongside sustainable operational procedures.

Experience the benefits at The Lamination Station which will brilliantly laminate your projects while providing strong finishes that meet strict deadlines.